Lifestyle Photographer / Writer Main menu Post navigation #2015 Here's a rundown of what I've been up to in 2015 so far and what I've been working on. I successfully ran a half marathon for the first time in July in Austin. I took on a new gig which put a lot of my projects on hold. I still have lots of work and projects for 2016. I'm currently in the throes of a personal project with the goal of making a series of photographs from the "D-List" people in the world. Look out for more videos, interviews, and maybe even a book in 2016! 1. My first marathon was a local half in Austin that followed the South by Southwest SXSW Route. It was a fun experience with a wonderful group of runners. One of the most unexpected benefits of the race was a new found appreciation for the little things in life. 2. Another great year for commercial work in 2015. It was a year with a lot of lifestyle and personal work, but I'm moving away from that. I'm currently working on a project with a high school theater group to create videos for their production. More on that later! 3. I also made my first video, "Making of the Song, Treatment was performed in four groups, according to the level of plasma lactate and the stage of clinical symptomatology: 1) 46 babies with very low lactate levels (less than 2 mM) and a stage of clinical symptomatology from stage A to stage D were treated with methylprednisolone (40 mg/kg/day). After five days of treatment, plasma lactate levels increased significantly. The clinical symptomatology deteriorated significantly during the first 6-8 days of therapy and lasted until the end of observation. On the 15th day of treatment, the majority of babies had an improvement of clinical condition. 2) 7 babies with low lactate levels (less than 2 mM) and a stage of clinical symptomatology from stage B to stage D were treated with dexamethasone (0,6 mg/kg/day). Dexamethasone improved the plasma lactate levels and significantly affected the clinical status. Plasma lactate levels were normal at the end of observation. 3) 14 babies with low lactate levels (less than 2 mM) and a stage of clinical symptomatology from stage B to stage D were treated with mannitol (16 ml/kg/die). Mannitol increased plasma lactate levels, but had no effect on
